

HermanMiller
OE1 Workspace Collection™

Today's workplaces are faced with unique challenges: increasing their overall agility, making the most of real estate, ensuring new furniture works with existing facilities, and getting the most out of these investments. Until now, products have been designed to address only one or two of these issues at a time.

OE1 Workspace Collection

Designed by Sam Hecht and Kim Colin

OE1 is a collection of optimized, essential pieces designed to help people evolve their space by discovering what works now and changing rapidly for the future.

Design Story

To kick off what would become OE1, designers Sam Hecht and Kim Colin traveled around the world, exploring the current state and evolving nature of work and the implications for workplace design. “One thing we noticed is that day one, the furniture is installed—and day two, things needed to be changed,” Hecht says. “And when you zoom out to a macro view, you realize the exponential change within companies.”

With agility top of mind, the designers created something enjoyable and flexible—a product line that offers ample choice and is compatible with existing furniture. “OE1 is designed to ‘work with’ itself or alongside other pieces, in existing landscapes,” Colin says. Hecht describes it as a “pick and mix.” “Everything is having a conversation with each other,” he says, “and the conversation is healthy.”
